The NYPD is baffled as to the motives behind this strange case and are looking for anyone who has any leads as to who this person (dubbed "The Street Devil" unofficially) was.

"I'd say I've never seen anything like this," commented NYPD officer Marc Lamount, "but then again, given Devil's Thursday, Lucasta, the Spike Lee terrorist attack incident, the CruXshadows thing last Spring, the Darkwater case and a few recent things I can't precisely comment on... that would be a complete and utter lie."

Scientists Called in to Debunk Darkwater "Miracle"

Christine Darkwater, a Dominican nun who died two weeks ago in her cell at Ward's Island Hospital for the Cirminally insane, was buried last week. However, something of her memory refuses to be buried with her. The dogwood tree outside her cell window has apparently started to bloom, in spite of the Winter weather.

Darkwater, who was placed in the institution after her arrest for a number of fatal arsons throughout the Bronx, never spoke until the evening of her death. Friends of Christine who believe in her innocence have taken the dogwood tree as a "sign from God" indicating her non-involvement in the cases.

"The cross was made of dogwood," mentioned Catherine Ashland -one of the sisters from Christine's order, "God meant this to be a sign."

Officials at War's Island have announced as of Wednesday that they are going to let an expert on the premises to investigate the reason why the tree is blooming. They expect that a logical explanation will be found to this abnormality
